QUEENSBURY -- A public hearing will be held Thursday night on the draft environmental assessment compiled for work Warren County hopes to do at the county airport.

The county Board of Supervisors has approved a 1,000-foot extension of the runway, a decision made in 2003 but which has become the subject of criticism by some supervisors and government watchdog group Upstate New York Taxpayers Advocates.

The draft environmental assessment is a document that details the environmental impact of the runway extension and removal of obstructions around the airport.

The hearing is scheduled to start at 6:30 p.m. at the Activities Center in Queensbury Town Hall on Bay Road.
